

AT BRIDGTON ACADEMY.

The Oration Which Closed the Commencement Exercises.

GEN. STEWART L. WOODFORD'S ELOQUENT WORDS.

The World's Columbian Exposition and the Era in American History Which Have Made It Possible and Which It Suggests.

[Special to the Press.] BRIDGTON, June 29.—This is commencement time with the old Bridgton Academy at North Bridgton, and today has been the great day for both students and alumni. This evening, General Stewart L. Woodford of New York delivered the oration. He said:

General Stewart L. Woodford's Address. Next October we shall join with many nations in keeping the birthday of the New World, the day when Columbus landed four hundred years ago on the island of San Salvador. That day stands at the gateway between the old times and the new, for then began those four centuries of discovery, of struggle and achievement whose wonderful results are the crowning and most perfect fruit of all the ages.

Fifty may give this anniversary day that comes in this anniversary year to sober and serious reflection on these four centuries of American history.

Columbus came and unveiled the islands of the tropics and then the coast of South America to European possession. He sought a pathway to the spice lands of the Indies. He died in the thought that he had found the Eastern shore of that mysterious continent where the race had come into existence, and whose history was to be written in the shadows of Eden days. Human beings were on the island where first he landed. Golden ornaments were in their persons and rude weapons were in their hands. They told him of a land to the Southwest whence they had gotten their gold, and this tale lured him to the mainland. Spain and Portugal followed on these lines of discovery. Mexico and Peru were at last found, and the marvels of an Occidental civilization were unfolded, whose ruins, even as we see them to-day, are startling and stupendous.

In some far earlier time some Columbus, now forgotten, sailing eastward from Chinese, Japanese, or Indian shores had reached these continents upon their western edge. A civilization had grown up peaceful, tender, gentle, and good, without the name of Christ, was yet more Christian than that which in Greedy of Gold and Lust of Power cursed the islands of the gulf and the savannahs of the main land with deadly slavery. That story of the conquest of Mexico and Peru, of the slave ships, and of the middle passage is one of the most horrible records in the annals of time. But stranger of all is this: These people had been here so long that they did not know, even by tradition, whence they came. There is nothing new under the sun. These old navigators are unknown. No poet sings their praise. No historian recounts their labors. Their names, their works, their story forgotten, and their very civilization swept away by the civilized invader. Asia had forgotten them, and then national independence was assured.

Two theories were, however, interwoven in the union for mutual resistance against the crown; interwoven in the subsequent confederacy, and interwoven in the resulting Federal Constitution. These were the forces of State and National authority—the centrifugal and centripetal forces of government. Men had been trained to love the colonies, and then by inheritance to love the State. The sense of local freedom and the jealousy of central authority alike combined to make the citizen of the State distrustful of a new and untried national government. On the other hand men saw and felt that in union alone was strength, and that no government could endure without the power to enforce its own decrees and compel obedience to its own rights and commands. Between these theories there had to be compromise, or there could have been no agreement. The Federal Constitution was such a compromise, and out of that compromise grew the largest and best scheme of popular free government that the world has yet seen tried upon a large and comprehensive scale. Our fathers began with complete recognition of the absolute and inalienable rights of man as man. On this they built. Next they recognized the existence, the wisdom, the necessity of local self-government, that should be fully and finally trusted with all concerns. Then they evolved the large conception that as the State grew from the people to do their will and protect their rights, and secure their prosperity in local affairs, the nation grew from these same people to do their will and protect their rights and secure their welfare in national and continental affairs. This theory of dual governments is peculiar to us, and it has resulted in what has been so happily phrased as "the indissoluble Union of indissoluble States."

The Constitution was adopted. On the 30th of April, 1789, on Wall street, in New York, where his statue still stands, George Washington took his oath of office as the first President of the United States. The experiment was launched, and the judgment of mankind was invoked upon it.

This Great Effort for Free Government, of a continent under a written constitution.

Two theories remained; the two forces worked on. They who loved the State most insisted that to the State their first and highest allegiance was due, and that their allegiance was only due to the Union through the State. This was the essence of the doctrine and the tenet of State rights. They who loved the Union most insisted that to the Nation their first and highest allegiance belonged, and that when the Nation and the State were in conflict the Nation was forever supreme. The fact of negro slavery intensified this difference and added questions of property and conflicting sectional interests to this central question of constitutional construction. The debate went on; now on the hustings, now in Congress, and in courts, State and Federal, and at last on the field of battle. When the struggle of arms ended the debate was ended. Brave men and honorable men had submitted the question to the last tribunal known on earth, and when that tribunal had decided that this Union of States, both of the people of the United States, is and shall be forever between Church and State in every court of Europe.

When the settlement of Massachusetts and New England began there came to these shores not only adventurers and men eager for gain, but there came also very many who sought freedom of worship and rest from persecution. The story is familiar, so familiar that it needs no repetition. The Spaniard had come for gold, the Hollander had come for commerce, the Frenchman had come for vineyard and farm land, the Pilgrim and the Puritan came for liberty and God. Thus were added to the movements of discovery and settlement the tremendous forces of conscience and progress.

That first century of the English occupation of this continent, being the second century after the discovery of the new world, was the period in which the citizenship of our Republic was created and established. Whether he came to Virginia or New England the Briton brought all the rights of personal manhood that had been written with strong hands and stout hearts into the text of Magna Charta. But while he brought the right of the Commons he did not bring the burden of an inherited and traditional aristocracy. No kingly court ever cursed this soil; no noble stayed long after he came and few nobles came at all. From the beginning all that was freest and best in English custom and English law had full course and a fair field here.

Thus was laid on the Atlantic coast, from Plymouth Bay to Georgia the first and deepest and surest

Foundation of a Free State.

The full, free citizenship of the free man. This condition of free citizenship having been secured, the free man, who is the essential unit of the free State, being here, the building of the free State began. The colonies held charters from the crown, and local legislatures were a necessity. The wide ocean that rolled between the mother country and the settlement, the slow sailing ships, and the frequent communication compelled these colonies almost from the beginning to assume and exercise most of the functions of independent State. As the settlements grew in power they grew in self-reliance, and when the third century of the European occupation of the continent opened the process of State building was in full progress. Each decade the chartered colony became more and more the self-governing commonwealth. When at last the crown began its assertion of inherited prerogative the colonies made answer that Englishmen could not be taxed without representation, and that no Parliament could levy any impost upon citizen or colonist who had no vote in the choice of that Parliament and no voice in its councils. When that third century drew toward its closing the full-bodied State had come, fitted and ready for independent life.

As the first period may be called that of discovery; as the second that of the creation of American citizenship; as the third that of State building, so the fourth has been that of the creation and establishment of the nation.

When the colonies had been firmly rooted and were growing, they found interests and necessities that were common to each and all. Then there came need of mutual defense in the Indian wars. Then there came commercial agreements. The individual citizens had developed the free States, and now the free States developed the Nation. The compact in the cabin of the Mayflower, and the meetings of the first colonial assemblies had in them the seeds and the germs of the Declaration in 1776 and of the Federal Constitution of 1789. When the freedom of the citizen and the local self-government of the colony were assailed, by stern necessity came protest, remonstrance, resistance, and at last war.

Seven Years of Struggle, and then national independence was assured. Two theories were, however, interwoven in the union for mutual resistance against the crown; interwoven in the subsequent confederacy, and interwoven in the resulting Federal Constitution. These were the forces of State and National authority—the centrifugal and centripetal forces of government. Men had been trained to love the colonies, and then by inheritance to love the State. The sense of local freedom and the jealousy of central authority alike combined to make the citizen of the State distrustful of a new and untried national government. a Nation with all that nationality implies that decision was and is forever binding upon all. I am glad to believe that it has been and is thus loyally accepted by brave and honorable men the whole Republic over.

This fourth and last period, that of the establishment of the Nation, ended with the surrender at Appomattox, and with the adoption of the latest amendments to the constitution. Those amendments fixed the results of the war in the organic law of the land, and then the Nation, based and founded on manhood, suffrage, freed forever from the stain and weakness of human slavery, recognizing the State as an integral and enduring part of its national life,

Started Finally upon its Full Career.

Thus has come the America of today. What is this America whose past achievements, under present conditions, whose future we bid the world come hither that the world may study and judge? What this, our America, is in present territorial extent we know by actual measurement; and yet the most hopeful and enthusiastic hardly realize and comprehend its physical meaning. Measured from east to west from our farthest possessions on the coast of Maine to the uttermost of the Aleutian Islands, the physical center is on the same parallel of longitude with San Francisco. Measured from northwest to southeast, from those Aleutian Islands to the capes of Florida, that center is about at Portland, in Oregon. Measured by average of acres, the center of the Republic is near the heart of Kansas, far west of the Mississippi and the Missouri. Measured by population, the center is near the city of Columbus, in Indiana.

It is certainly an interesting coincidence that this Columbian anniversary year should find a city bearing the name of the great discoverer at the very heart of our American population.

What this, our America, is and is to be in material growth and development and in physical resources we know only in part, and even that but dimly. I never go to that marvelous city of Chicago by the inland seas without being more and more deeply impressed with its phenomenal progress and tremendous possibilities. The America of which Columbus dreamed, and for which Washington counseled and fought, is there; there with its great expanse of land; there at the core of this northern continent, a continent which Columbus never saw and to whose center Washington never came. But let us reverently thank God that there, at the very heart of the Republic, beneath the grasses of the prairie, sleeps the dust of that tender, patient and heroic man who saved the republic in its deadliest struggle, the dust of Abraham Lincoln.

I might repeat statistics of population and production. I might tell you of telegraphs and railways that could be bound thrice, yea, four times around the world, an imperial girdle of civilization. I might tell you of factories and mines, and of corn and cotton that could feed and clothe the world; but all these figures of stupendous actual results and more stupendous possibilities would only bewilder and confuse.

What this, our America, is in opportunity for each citizen to grow to the full stature of individual manhood we always know in theory and we sometimes realize in fact. Here

Every Man is Free and Equal to every other man in his legal right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Here is no slave. Here is no noble. Here, in the midst of all these possibilities of material growth and wealth, every man stands before the law and at the ballot box an uncrowned king. To what shall this, our America, grow? Rest is impossible. In all this vast creation, in plant, in earth, in every stone, there is no final rest. So is there none in man, in social system, or in state. We grow to better or we lapse to worse. The manhood of the people will grow more manly, or it shall sink backward through sickening change of weakness, vice and degradation to unmanly loss of liberty and unmanly submission to the slavery, first of the mob, and then of the despot.

I am no pessimist. I do not believe that these days are worse than those far days when Columbus sailed first upon unknown seas. I know that they are better; as much better as the dawn is brighter than the first hour after the midnight. I do not believe that these days are worse than when the Mayflower landed at Plymouth. I know that they are better; better in their broader charity and in their larger acceptance of the great truths of that historic compact in the cabin of the Mayflower. I do not believe that these days are worse than when Washington stood with hand on the Bible and face uplifted to heaven and swore to preserve and defend the Constitution of the young Republic and the liberties of the people. I know that there is no slavery here, that there is no flag, and that the Constitution is at last a Constitution consistent with itself, a guarantee of freedom to all the people and a pledge of enduring union between all the States.

There is no flight of fancy, but cold and mathematical truth, when we say that more men are well fed, well clothed and well housed this day than on any day since the first man had birth. These are the physical needs of living. More men are saved, and write this day, more can learn the story of the past and tell for future times the story of the present than in any year of all ages. These are the intellectual needs of living. More men to-day worship God freely without compulsion by other men, obedient alone to their own consciences than in all the centuries, and this is what Roger Williams called "soul liberty." There are no racks, no stake fires, no gibbets, and no inquisitions that the sun looks down upon in his journey round the world.

Man is More Free

In body; more free in mind; more free in conscience and in soul in this year 1892 than he has ever before since time began, and he is more free here in our America to-day than he is elsewhere in all the world.

Is there then no danger? Are there no causes for just fear? Let me not mar the beauty of this festival nor break the harmonies of our glad gathering by prophecies of evil.

Let each man look into his own heart and ask himself, "What of the Republic?" If each shall do his duty it shall be well with all. To each citizen the Republic gives her honor and her future in sacred keeping. And so, to one and all, as now we part, let me simply say, may the God of Washington and Lincoln guard and save our Fatherland.

NECESSITY'S SHARP PINCH

WE DON'T LIKE IT. It's not comforting to us to get $5.00 for something that we know to be worth much more. It isn't a trade pleasure to mark down prices. It was not a highly exhilarating pastime to throw a lot of $15, $18 and $20 Frock Suits on the market at $10, or those $5 and $6 Trousers at $3.50. No business man enjoys such things--they are business necessities--things accumulate in excess of the most discerning foresight.

Lo it is with Boys' Clothing, over 300 pairs of All Wool Knee Pants are offered to close at 40 and 50 cents per pair.
Boys' All Wool Summer Reefers, $2.50, $3.50 and $5.

THE DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CONVENTION.

It seems entirely unnecessary to comment at any great length on the Democratic county convention which was held here yesterday. Democratic members of it made all the comment that is needed. They exposed very clearly the disreputable methods which were employed to carry this city for Mr. Swett, and confirmed all that the Press has said on the subject. No observer of ordinary perception who watched the proceedings at the caucuses, and who reads the report of yesterday's proceedings can doubt for an instant that the expectation of the men who nominated Mr. Swett is to secure for sheriff a man who will nullify the prohibitory law. Mr. Charles McCarthy's "reasonable enforcement" will deceive no one. Not a single rumrunner will be driven away from Mr. Swett's support by anything that Mr. McCarthy said. They know perfectly well that it will lie entirely in Mr. Swett's power to determine what a reasonable enforcement is, and the orations of his chief spokesman in which people who believe in the prohibitory law have been stigmatized as "cranks and doctrinaires" and the prohibitory law pronounced "iniquitous folly" have convinced them that a "reasonable enforcement" as interpreted by Mr. Swett will have no terror for them.

But it is not necessary to rely solely on the deliverances of Mr. Swett's friends for an indication of the interpretation he is likely to put upon Mr. McCarthy's reasonable enforcement. Mr. Swett has been city marshal of Portland several months. One of his duties is to enforce the liquor law. The fact that the sheriff is also charged with that duty does not absolve the Marshal in the least. The Argus has been informing the public for weeks past that drunkenness was more prevalent than ever, that pocket peddlers were numerous and that there was an abundance of liquor sold on the sly. Yet the public has read the daily papers in vain for reports of liquor seizures by Marshal Swett and his police force. If they have made any the fact has been very carefully guarded. If Mr. Swett has been giving us since he has been marshal what he regards as a reasonable enforcement then reasonable enforcement and no enforcement at all are synonymous terms in his estimation. We have no desire to do Mr. Swett any injustice, but the utterances of his friends and his conduct of the police force have left the impression on the public mind that he is willing to accept an office which imposes upon him the duty of enforcing certain laws vigorously and impartially with the understanding with his party or a portion of it that he will partially or entirely ignore certain of these laws. If the impression is fast ripening into conviction it is because Mr. Swett has kept silent in the face of such accusation—an accusation which was first made by his friends. If he cares to remove this impression let him speak now and pledge himself before the voters of Cumberland county to a vigorous and impartial enforcement of all the laws—to as vigorous pursuit of the violator of the liquor law as of the transgressor against the law of larceny.

RECEPTION TO A PASTOR.

The members of the Free Church, Deering, and their friends gave a very pleasant reception to their pastor and his wife on their return from their wedding tour last Thursday evening. Owing to the severe storm many were kept at home but quite a large number were present, and the occasion was much enjoyed by all.

The following poem by Elizabeth Converse Durgin was read by Mrs. Knight, who in behalf of the church and friends presented him a sum of money as a wedding gift.

When June smiles through her fleecy clouds,
And fragrant wings unfold,
Floats o'er the land the roses blush
For very joy, behold,
And stately flowers peep from the grass,
And trees bend, rustling over,
And little maids look shyly up,
To show a four-leafed clover,

Through leaves and grass a whisper runs,
Like sighings of Gamella,
The troubadour murmurs forth:
"Is marriage now a failure?"
Then reverent students of Saint Paul,
Like you who stand before us,
Reply in all humility,
In softly ringing chorus:

"The problem is a weighty one.
Be ours the task to solve it.
And, through the coming happy years
At leisure to resolve it.
Meanwhile we are content, secure,
Upon the sacred letter,
And, gladly choosing to 'do well,'
We will resign the 'better.'"

What wonder if our tears should fall,
As we remember this,
That two more souls have failed to gain
Paul's solitary bliss?

Yet sweet to us your sacrifice,
"A long-felt want" supplying,
We greet with joy our pastor's wife,
And hush our dreary sighing.

On these who bear henceforth one name,
A name to us expressing Devotion, energy and faith—
We pray our Father's blessing,
And, as the solemn years go by,
May life grow gladder, sweeter,
And brave feet, following rugged ways,
The stronger be, and firmer.

The shadow of a selfish thought,
Alas! 'twill now be falling;
We would be held in memory,
For this our hearts are calling.
So in your home, wherever it be,
We fain would have some token
Of love that, through the storms of life
May still abide unbroken.

The love of money is a root,
Whence many an evil springeth,
And into dangers manifold
Unwary souls it bringeth.
Then love it not—the wedding gift
That church and friends now tender;
Yet money all things answereth,
If it is love surrender.

With finer touch than Midas knew Transform to thought—rich pages,
This trifling, that your souls may feed
On love of saints and sages,
Then may the thoughts of unseen friends
Out-trinkle as you ponder,
Your love reach us through time and space,
Till we shall meet "up yonder."

WELL KNOWN IN THOUSANDS OF HOUSEHOLDS IN THE PINE TREE
STATE.

CERTS—I am now 57 years old, and for over 10 years I have been afflicted with weak kidneys so badly at times that I could not rest nights. I could get no position that would be comfortable my back was so lame.

My liver also became affected, causing very serious illness. I had a dull headache continually accompanied by a sluggish tired feeling.

My appetite was very poor, and I would have a deathly faintness at pit of stomach.

For the last two years I have been greatly troubled with severe palpitation of the heart, and the hearing and in long protracted meetings it would become very serious.

I have used the two Course of SKODA'S DISCOVERY and LITTLE TABLETS you kindly sent me, and through the blessing of God, I am PER-FECTLY CURED—have not felt better for 20 years. Fraternally yours,

They're a bit too bright for the city street, but where the subduing influences of the trees and grasses are they're picturesque and quite in harmony with surrounding things. They don't cost much and a scarlet sunshade is an important adjunct to the get-up of the summer girl.

We have them in silk,
beruffled, trimmed with chiffon, or flounced with lace, at all sorts of prices.

We have the quieter
kinds too made of shades of golden brown and
and gray silks, lace trimmed and plain, and no end of black ones and black and whites.

By the way, we are showing some remarkable coaching Parasols, all of one color with handle to match and a silk cover of the same shade, which goes on smoothly and rolls closely. They are as neat as possible and two or three raised together would present a positively dazzling appearance.

It's a splendid show of parasols, and sunshades and umbrellas that we are showing now and the range of sorts compre-hends everything that's desirable and correct.

CITY OF DEERING.

Prohibitionists Hold Their Caucus.
The prohibitionists met last night at Adams Hall and elected the following delegates to the state convention to be held in Portland on July 21:
Dr. Carlton Kimball,
Rev. William Finkham,
W. B. Kimball,
E. W. Kimball,
William F. Cobb,
M. J. Doherty,
F. M. Blackstone,
Moses A. Ryder.

There is one over the number because it is expected that most of them cannot attend the convention all of the time.
The delegates were instructed to favor the election of Mr. Cram as sheriff.

Rev. E. W. Webster of Westbrook will preach at the Allen's Corner church next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. All are invited.

A boy named Hooper, who lives with his grandmother on Pleasant street, Deering, disappeared from home a few days ago, and there was much excitement. It turned out that the boy had hidden in B. M. Eastman's barn, where he was fed by his playmates of the neighborhood. Chief of Police Parkman found him.

Alumni of the Fraternity.

The alumni association of the Portland Fraternity held their first meeting last night and perfected their organization. The following are the officers of the association:
President—John H. Hamel,
Vice President—F. J. Maguire,
Secretary—F. J. Mitchell,
Treasurer—J. C. Woodill,
Executive Committee—Thomas J. Murphy, James A. Dickson, Joseph W. Mitchell.

Pavilion Theatre.

Another large audience was present at this popular summer theatre last evening to see the Paymaster, and judging from the frequent bursts of applause, they all must have been richly entertained. It begins to look as though this attraction will be a most profitable one to Manager McCallum, and the indications are that with good weather his summer theatre will be crowded at the evening performances for the rest of the week. The matinees are also steadily growing in favor. A great many ladies and children were present at yesterday's matinee.

An Elegant Train.

The first through train from Chicago since the washout arrived yesterday morning on the Grand Trunk. It was the new fast train and left again at 8.15 last night. Since the change and until this train came through passengers have been transferred at the washout. Three elegant new Pullman cars were attached to the train and each train will have a Pullman each for Montreal, Quebec and Chicago. This train will prove a popular one for through passengers.

THE PRACTICE SCHOOL.

Interesting Graduating Exercises at Reception Hall Last Evening.

The graduating exercises of the Portland Practice School, of which Miss Sarah M. Taylor is principal, took place at Reception Hall last evening. Superintendent O. M. Lord presided, and introduced Mr. A. P. Marble, superintendent of schools in Worcester, who made an admirable address on "The Scope and Modifications of Public School Education." He spoke of the vast change in popular systems of education in the past fifty years, and sketched the modern ideas and aims in different branches of study. He gave the young teachers many valuable hints about methods of teaching, drawn from his long experience in the public schools of Massachusetts. He spoke with special emphasis of the duties of teachers in caring for the bodily comfort of pupils in the school room and in seeing that proper ventilation is provided by frequently opening the windows, if the regular system of ventilation is deficient. His suggestions should be carefully considered and adopted as far as may be found practicable.

At the close of Mr. Marble's address, diplomas were conferred by Mr. Bradley, of the school committee, upon the following:

Lydla Hobart Beck,
Ella Clark McKenney,
Mary Bertram Logan,
Bertha Brooks Waterhouse,
Rugenia Isabel Charleton,
Mary Ellen Nesmith, Christina Marie Thompson,
Marie Louise Houston,
Clara Belle Lang,
Marion Julia Chapman.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

The Gathering Today Will Be Orderly and Enthusiastic.

The Republican county convention will meet today at 10 o'clock in Reception Hall. It will be an enthusiastic and orderly gathering of the loyal Republicans of the county. The nominations to be made are for senators, county attorney, sheriff, judge of probate, register of probate, county treasurer and one county commissioner. In most of these offices there will be substantial unanimity. Chas. A. True, Esq., for county attorney, and Daniel D. Cheney for treasurer, will be nominated without opposition. So also will Sheriff Cram, Judge of Probate Peabody and Register of Probate Reynolds, whose successful administration of their offices in the past two years entitle them under the usage to renomination. For the county commissionership there are several candidates. Mr. Walter Allen of Yarmouth, who made a good try two years ago; Mr. Long of Harrison, who is well backed by that town; Mr. N. H. Seavey of Harrison, a staunch old Republican war horse of Northern Cumberland, and Mr. B. S. Skillings of Oatfield, another staunch Northern Cumberland Republican worker. For senator E. B. Mallet, Jr., of Westbrook, has no opposition. Westbrook will present Mr. C. M. Waterhouse, in opposition to Colonel Edward Moore. For the Portland district, Hon. Geo. M. Selders and Capt. J. S. Winslow are candidates; while from the Northern district an unexpected contest has arisen. Four years ago Mr. Wm. M. Cook of Casco was a candidate. He was defeated, but accepted his defeat loyally and waited for this year. It was generally accepted that he had a clear field until a few days ago, when ex-representative Kimball of Bridgton appeared in the field. It is understood that Charles S. Cook, Esq., of this city, will preside today.

A GOLD MINE.

Precious Metal Said to Have Been Discovered in Livermore.

There is considerable quiet interest about this town in a gold mine which is believed to have been discovered in the town of Livermore. It is on a piece of land owned by a man named Huff, not far from Livermore Falls. There is said to be silver as well as gold in the deposit, and the ore is reported to have yielded $18 to the ton. Parties in Lewiston and Westbrook and Portland are interested in the development of the property and a company will soon be formed. The land was bonded fully a year ago. Messrs. W. C. G. Carney and George F. Carney are said to be interested in the find.

WESTBROOK.

The Electric Cars Arrive from Portland and Are Joyously Received.

Two of the new electric cars reached Westbrook yesterday afternoon, having on board the directors of the road, Superintendent Newman, a number of members of our city government, and many other prominent people. The American band and a large crowd of people were in the square as the cars swiftly glided in, and the cars came to a stop amid the music of the band and waving of handkerchiefs. As soon as the cars were vacated by those who went out from Portland, the band stepped into their places together with a large number of Westbrook's citizens, and were given a ride to the east end and return. The crowds of people, the music by the band, together with the flags displayed, made the arrival of the first electric cars a joyous occasion.

CELEBRATING THE VICTORY.

Gorham's Corner Was a Festive Place Last Night Over Swett's Nomination.

The victory of George L. Swett in the sheriff fight was celebrated in royal style at Gorham's Corner and on the streets leading to it last evening. An immense bonfire burned in the square at the corner, while on the three main streets leading to it were other fires. There was one also on Free street near the head of Centre street. From time to time cannon crackers were exploded, and the sidewalks were crowded with people, all happy over the Swett victory.

Greetings to General Dow.

At 7.30 last evening General Dow received the following telegram:

CINCINNATI, June 29.
To Hon. Neal Dow:
The delegates of the National Prohibition Party, in convention at Cincinnati, 972 in number, send greeting and good cheer.

H. WOODWORTH,
CHAS. A. MACNAMARA,
J. H. SOUTHWORTH,
Committee.

Flag Raising at Cliff Cottage.

Last evening there was a flag raising at Cliff Cottage, C. B. Saunders's summer hotel on Cape Elizabeth. The flag is a handsome one and strictly non-partisan. But it was raised with enough enthusiasm and cheers to do for any political event of a similar sort. When the flag was safely floating at the top of the pole refreshments were served for the company present.
